

Picture Pages

WHERE THERE'S SMOKE...: "Who is Miss Flame?" was the feature of the 1950 National Fire Prevention week in Richland. A contest to uncover the identity of Miss Flame was featured prominently on local radio broadcasts and in newspaper ads. Clues were dropped through-out the week to help the public solve the mystery. The winner took home a $25 gift certificate good with all Richland merchants. In addition to the contest, Pasco radio station KPKW broadcast the "Man on the Street" radio quiz program at noon during the week. Dr. Stopp Fyre would quiz unsuspecting citizens about fire safety. The mysterious Miss Flame (left) would be in attendance atop a Chevrolet van encouraging curbside onlookers to improve their fire safety habits at home and work. At the end of the week Miss Flame's identity was revealed — she was Thelma Sevell Hays.

PIE IN THE EYE: CH2M HILL Hanford Group's Rich Higgins pauses to reflect after eating an entire pie in under two minutes in a pie-eating contest to raise funds for the United Way campaign. His time of a minute and 51 seconds won out against fellow CH2M HILL participants Joel Eacker, Chris Mercado and John McDonald. The event raised $262. CH2M HILL employees have pledged more than $160,000 in this year's campaign.

Picture Pages

A LOTTA ALARA TECHNOLOGIES: (From left) James Hall of Eagle-Picher Technologies, Nicholas Liewer of Master-Lee Hanford Corporation, Aage Hval of TRUMPF, Inc. and Richard Largent of Master-Lee share technologies and information at the Vendor Trade Show during the fourth Hanford ALARA workshop. The workshop was held Oct. 21-23 at the Red Lion in Richland.